THESIS

LVLU is executing a legitimate operational turnaround (48.6% Q2 gross margin, the highest second quarter since 2021, positive first-half Adjusted EBITDA and free cash flow, 130% LTM wholesale growth) while trading at 0.18x revenue versus peer REVOLVE Group at approximately 1.3x. The valuation disconnect is driven by governance deficiencies, minimal institutional engagement, and zero analyst coverage rather than fundamental business problems. A constructive activist campaign (Friedland Enterprises, ~5% ownership) has already produced the hiring of a permanent CFO and board approval to reduce authorized shares from 250M to 15M. Updated for Q2 2026: our base case now models $265M revenue and $1.5-2.5M positive Adjusted EBITDA for FY2026, reflecting the deliberate markdown pullback that traded top line for the highest Q2 gross margin since 2021 (48.6%). Multiples are unchanged since March: at 0.3x P/S (still a ~77% discount to REVOLVE), the stock reaches $25-26. Wholesale grew 130% LTM across 9 major partners with two more added since Q3 began. All targets revise on reported results and share count only; see the revision log.

WHOLESALE REVENUE TRAJECTORY ($M)

Partners: 2 (FY23) → 4 (FY24) → 9 (FY25) → 11+ (FY26E). Same-account revenue growth: +61% LTM per the Q2'26 call.

GROSS MARGIN & EBITDA MARGIN (%)

Seven consecutive quarters of product margin expansion. Q2'26 gross margin of 48.6% is the highest second quarter since 2021.

LEADING INDICATORS: THE RESET IS CONVERTING (SOURCE: Q2 2026 EARNINGS CALL)

UNITS PER NEW LAUNCH

Q2'26: +28% Detail: +29%

Fewer launches, each selling more units. SKU productivity approaching 2021 levels.

CASUAL/FW NEW LAUNCHES

Q2'26: -48% Detail: H2 normal

vs. prior year. Deliberate pullback continues; launch volume normalizes in H2.

MARKDOWN SALES

Q2'26: -38% Detail: -65% casual

Regular-price mix shift is the revenue trade behind the 48.6% gross margin.

REORDER-ELIGIBLE CONVERSION

Ahead of internal targets

New 2026 styles, per Q2'26 call

New-customer acquisition contribution from casual and footwear improving into Q3.

INVENTORY RESET

Casual: -43% | FW: -58%

vs. prior year

Total inventory down 23% to $28.6M. Active customers expected to stabilize by year end.

These metrics were disclosed on the Q2 2026 earnings call (August 12, 2026), the second consecutive quarter of this level of operational granularity. Units per launch remains the key leading indicator: it validates that the casual/footwear reset is producing higher-quality introductions before the revenue impact arrives, which management now points to in 2027.

No bear price target is published; the bear scenario assumes no re-rating and therefore contains nothing for a target to measure. REVOLVE Group (RVLV) currently trades at ~1.3x P/S on ~$1.3B trailing revenue. Shares outstanding: 3.01M.

KEY RISKS

Tariff exposure: Import-heavy fashion brand with unquantified exposure to tariff-affected countries. Margin expansion story at risk if rates increase materially.

Customer attrition: Active customers down 13% YoY and 5% sequentially at Q2'26. Management targets stabilization by year end; failure there is the primary threat to the 2027 recovery.

Liquidity: Net debt improved to ~$6M with positive first-half free cash flow, but the ABL remains borrowing-base constrained as wholesale scales working capital needs.

Wholesale margin dilution: No channel-level margin disclosure. If wholesale runs 30–35% gross margin vs. 44%+ DTC, mix shift compresses blended margins.

Casual/footwear reset execution: Entire H2 revenue improvement thesis depends on new assortment resonating. Units-per-launch metrics are encouraging but unproven at scale.

Micro-cap liquidity: Float of ~600–700K shares. Position exits require elevated volume. Daily trading can be volatile and illiquid.
